January Is Cervical Cancer Awareness Month

Vaccination and Screening Can Help Prevent Cervical Cancer

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) estimates that approximately 4,000 women die from cervical cancer in the United States every year. January has been designated as Cervical Cancer Awareness Month by the U.S. Congress to emphasize the importance of vaccination and early detection through appropriate screenings.

A major cause of cervical cancer is the human papilloma virus (HPV). The HPV vaccination is a two-dose series: the first dose is recommended at age 11–12 years (can start at age 9 years) and the second 6–12 months later. Note: HPV Vaccine age guidelines do include high-risk adults 27 through 45 years of age.

Cervical cancer may be preventable with HPV vaccination and regular screenings (Pap and/or HPV tests). Early detection helps in identifying cervical cancer when it is easier to treat.
